Reflections on the Past,
Present and the Future

Carla Ferstman

Professor of Law at the University of Essex

Professor Ferstman, a dual Canadian and British citizen, is a member of the Council of Europe's Expert Council on NGO Law and a judge on the Aban Tribunal, a 'People's Tribunal' established to investigate atrocities alleged to have taken in place in Iran during the November 2019 protests. She is also a member of the Justice Rapid Response Experts Roster and in that capacity has conducted investigations and provided analysis on sexual exploitation and abuse in humanitarian settings. Equally, she is the Chair of the Advisory Committee of Lawyers for Justice in Libya.

Prior to joining academia in 2018, she worked in the human rights field for 25 years. After a brief period in private practice in Canada as a criminal defence lawyer, she began working internationally, first for the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights in Rwanda, and thereafter for the International Secretariat of Amnesty International in London. She was then appointed Executive Legal Advisor of the Commission for Real Property Claims of Refugees and Displaced Persons in Bosnia and Herzegovina, a mass claims body established pursuant to the Dayton Peace Accords to re-establish property rights and assist displaced persons to return home. In 2001, she joined REDRESS, first as Legal Director and from 2004 - 2018 as Director.

She researches, writes, and consults in the areas of human rights, international criminal law and public international law.
