

INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL COURT AT 20

Reflections on the Past,
Present and the Future

Darryl Robinson

Professor of law at Queen's University

Darryl Robinson is a Full Professor at Queen's University Faculty of Law (Canada). He has worked on international criminal justice for over 25 years, starting as an NGO advocate for a permanent international criminal court.

After clerking at the Supreme Court of Canada, he served as an international lawyer at Foreign Affairs Canada (1997-2004), supporting international criminal justice initiatives. His role in the negotiation of the Rome Statute, as well as Canada's Crimes Against Humanity Act, earned him a Minister's Citation and a Minister's Award for Foreign Policy Excellence. He served as an adviser in the ICC Office of the Prosecutor from 2004 to 2006.

Professor Robinson was the Gold Medallist at Western University Faculty of Law. He did his LL.M at New York University School of Law, where he was a Hauser Scholar and received the Jerome Lipper Award for outstanding achievement. He has a PhD from Leiden University.

Professor Robinson has published around 50 publications on international criminal law, including Justice in Extreme Cases, about fundamental principles, and co-authoring the popular Introduction to International Criminal Law and Procedures textbook with Robert Cryer and Sergey Vasiliev. His writings focus on fundamental principles of justice in ICL, crimes against humanity, ICL discourse, complementarity, and trigger mechanisms. He was the 2013-14 recipient of the Antonio Cassese Prize for International Criminal Legal Studies for his innovative and influential contributions to the field.
