

PUBLIC REDACTED VERSION OF Annex X

CONFIDENTIAL

 presents its compliments to the International Criminal Court – Registry, Cooperation and External Relations Office – and, according to information transmitted by the  authorities in response to a request for cooperation in the case of the Prosecutor v. Maxime Jeoffroy Eli Mokom Gawaka (ref: NV/2022/EOSS/362/JCA/rk) has the honour to inform the International Criminal Court that the  legal system does not have rules that allow the supervision of a situation of provisional release, pre-trial, subject to coercive measures, outside the European Union.

Although the Rome Statute provides for this form of cooperation, in a broad sense, as a form of assistance to be provided by the States Parties to the Statute to the International Criminal Court, its internal regulations, attributing competence to the  judicial authorities to supervise the execution of alternative coercive measures to the coercive measure of preventive detention, was not carried out.

In fact, the only legislative instrument that allows the execution,  of coercive measures alternative to preventive detention, is   which transposed the  and, for that reason, it is only applicable to the Member States of the European Union.

[REDACTED]

For its part, the framework law on international cooperation in criminal matters, [REDACTED] does not provide for this form of cooperation in any of its chapters.

As such, in the absence of a legislative framework that provides for the execution of coercive measures, in [REDACTED] applied by an authority different from the judicial authorities of the European Union, it does not seem possible to us to grant the accompaniment of an accused, within a framework of coercive measures, as requested by the International Criminal Court.

[REDACTED] avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the International Criminal Court - Registry, Cooperation and External Relations Office, the assurances of its highest consideration. [REDACTED]
